Historical Background of the Congo Free State

The Congo Free State was established in 1885 during the Berlin Conference, where European powers divided Africa among themselves. King Leopold II of Belgium claimed the territory as his personal property, promoting it as a philanthropic venture aimed at civilizing the African population. However, the reality was starkly different. The wealth of the region, particularly its rubber and ivory, became the main focus of exploitation.

Under Leopold's rule, the Congo was subjected to a brutal regime characterized by forced labor, violence, and severe punishments for those who did not meet production quotas. This period lasted until 1908, when international pressure forced Belgium to take control of the territory, transitioning it from a personal domain of Leopold II to a Belgian colony.
