Understanding the American Psycho Aesthetic

The aesthetic of "American Psycho" is characterized by a blend of opulence, minimalism, and sharp contrasts. The film and the character of Patrick Bateman represent a hyperbolic view of the 1980s yuppie culture, where status symbols and appearances are paramount. The business card serves as a metaphorical tool for identity and social standing, reflecting the character's obsession with image over substance.

The film's portrayal of business cards highlights the importance of design and presentation in the corporate environment. Bateman's meticulous attention to detail in his card—its weight, texture, and color—signifies his desire to stand out amongst his peers. This obsession with aesthetics can be translated into creating a personal business card that embodies professionalism while still capturing a unique flair.

Elements of the Business Card Template
