History and Background

The Federal Business Council Inc. (FBC) was established in the early 2000s with the goal of bridging the gap between government agencies and the private sector. Over the years, FBC has evolved and adapted to the changing landscape of federal procurement. Initially focused on providing networking opportunities, the organization has expanded its services to include training, resources, and advocacy. With a commitment to promoting small businesses, FBC has become an essential resource for companies looking to engage with federal contracts.

FBC's mission revolves around facilitating communication and collaboration between the government and businesses. This includes organizing events, workshops, and conferences that bring together key stakeholders in the federal contracting sphere. Through these initiatives, FBC has successfully fostered a vibrant community of businesses and government representatives, enhancing mutual understanding and facilitating smoother procurement processes.
