This often manifests as a series of negative thoughts or feelings that build upon one another, creating a vicious cycle that can be hard to escape. Understanding this concept is crucial because recognizing when you are spiraling can be the first step toward regaining control.

When someone is spiraling, they may experience a variety of symptoms, including heightened anxiety, feelings of hopelessness, and a constant sense of overwhelm. It can feel like being trapped in a whirlwind of negative emotions, where every thought seems to exacerbate the situation. This is where tools like the "Am I Spiraling Quiz" become significant, as they help individuals identify these patterns early on.
