Therianthropy is a belief or identity that some individuals hold, where they feel a deep connection or affinity with a particular animal or animals. This connection can manifest in various ways, including emotional, psychological, and even spiritual experiences. The term "therian" comes from the Greek word "therion," meaning beast or wild animal, and those who identify as therians often describe themselves as having an animal spirit or an inner animal that influences their thoughts and behaviors.

For many therians, this experience is not merely a hobby or a phase; it is a fundamental aspect of their identity. They may feel a sense of belonging to the natural world that extends beyond that of a typical pet owner or animal lover. It can be a significant part of their self-concept, influencing how they interact with the world and perceive themselves.
