The story follows two rival groups—the Greasers and the Socs—each representing different socioeconomic backgrounds. Understanding these characters not only enhances your appreciation of the story but also makes for a more engaging quiz experience.

The Greasers

The Greasers are a group of working-class youths who often find themselves in conflict with the wealthier Socs. They are characterized by their long hair, leather jackets, and a sense of loyalty to each other. Here are some of the key Greaser characters:

- Ponyboy Curtis: The novel's narrator, Ponyboy is a sensitive and intelligent young man who struggles with his identity and the harsh realities of life as a Greaser.

- Sodapop Curtis: Ponyboy's charming and carefree brother, Sodapop serves as a mediator between Ponyboy and their older brother, Darry.
- Darry Curtis: The oldest Curtis brother, Darry takes on the role of guardian after their parents' death. He is tough but deeply cares for his brothers.
- Johnny Cade: A quiet and vulnerable member of the Greasers, Johnny is often seen as a tragic figure who yearns for love and acceptance.
- Dally Winston: A hardened Greaser with a tough exterior, Dally has a troubled past and often acts as a protector of the younger Greasers.

The Socs

The Socs, short for Socials, are the affluent youths of the town who often clash with the Greasers. They embody privilege and often display a sense of entitlement. Key Soc characters include:

- Cherry Valance: A Soc girl who becomes an important ally to Ponyboy, Cherry offers a unique perspective on the social divide.
- Bob Sheldon: The main antagonist, Bob is Cherry's boyfriend and represents the violent side of the Socs, often bullying Greasers for fun.
