The rising cost of college textbooks has become a significant concern for students and parents alike. Textbook prices have increased dramatically over the past few decades, often outpacing inflation. This surge in costs can be attributed to several factors, including the high price of new editions, the bundling of textbooks with online resources, and the limited market competition.

On average, students can expect to spend between $1,000 and $1,500 per year on textbooks alone. This figure can vary widely depending on the student's major, course load, and the specific books required. Understanding these costs is crucial for students as they navigate their academic journey and seek ways to mitigate these expenses.
