Wholesale textbooks refer to educational books that are sold in bulk at reduced prices, typically to retailers, educational institutions, or organizations. The wholesale market for textbooks primarily serves a variety of stakeholders, including bookstores, libraries, schools, and even students who wish to resell books.

The wholesale textbook industry is influenced by several factors, including changes in educational curricula, the rise of digital learning materials, and the increasing cost of college education. As students seek more affordable options, wholesalers have adapted by offering a wider range of products, including used textbooks and digital formats. Understanding this market is essential for making informed purchasing decisions.
